

U.S. DOE APPLIANCE STANDARDS RULEMAKINGS SCHEDULE

*Prepared by Appliance Standards Awareness Project
Updated December 23, 2011*

The following schedule includes completed and estimated dates for U.S. Department of Energy (DOE) rulemakings. Dates for prospective events are based on the published DOE schedules, if available, or ASAP estimates. Items in this shade have been completed. The estimated or required date for items in this shade has passed without DOE completing the item. Items not shaded are expected on the date indicated.

(See note 'a' below for a definition of terms)

ASHRAE Products (The American Society of Heating, Refrigerating & Air-Conditioning Engineers)^b

Standards	Certain equipment standards were amended in ASHRAE 90.1-2010. For each of these, DOE must either adopt the amended standard level by April 2012 or adopt a more stringent standard level, if justified, by April 2013.
	Notice of data availability	May 5, 2011
	Proposed rule	January 2012*
	Final rule	April 2012

Automatic Ice Makers

Test Procedures	Proposed rule	April 4, 2011
	Final rule	April 2012
Standards	Framework document	November 19, 2010
	Preliminary analysis	August 2011
	Proposed rule	May 2012
	Final rule	November 2012

Battery Chargers

Test Procedures- Standby and Off Mode	Proposed rule	August 15, 2008
	Final rule	March 27, 2009
Test Procedures	Proposed rule	April 2, 2010
	Final rule	June 1, 2011
Standards	Framework document	June 4, 2009
	Preliminary analysis	September 15, 2010
	Proposed rule	June 2011
	Final rule	July 2011

Blowers, Fans, and Fume Hoods

Standards	Determination of coverage	June 28, 2011
-----------	---------------------------	---------------

Boilers, Commercial

Standards	Rulemaking triggered by revision to ASHRAE standards in January 2008.
	Preliminary analysis	July 16, 2008
	Proposed rule	March 20, 2009
	Final rule	July 22, 2009

Note a: The DOE rulemaking process typically takes three years. After each document is published, there is an open public comment period (usually between 30 and 75 days) and a public hearing in Washington DC. Times between each step can vary but are generally as stated:

Framework Document - Beginning step; DOE casts a broad net over the many issues which the rulemaking might encompass and asks for feedback from stakeholders to help steer them in the appropriate direction.

1.5 years later...

Preliminary Technical Support Document (referred to above as preliminary analysis) - DOE discusses methodologies and results of the preliminary technical analyses.

1 year later...

Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NOPR) - DOE proposes standard levels, provides completed technical analyses, and requests final comments.

6 months later...

Final Rule - The rule is published and, usually, the standard goes into effect three years later (sometimes shorter, sometimes longer).

Draft Determination: This document provides the basis for determining if mandatory energy conservation standards are warranted and would result in significant energy savings. Determinations precede a regular rulemaking designed to determine standards levels, but Congress only required a determination phase for a few products.

Final Determination: The final rule which determines if energy conservation standards are warranted. If the determination is positive, the next step would typically be a Proposed Rule.

Note b. EPCA requires that if ASHRAE Standard 90.1 is amended with respect to any of the "ASHRAE Products," DOE must either establish an amended standard for the product(s) at the level specified in ASHRAE 90.1 or establish a more stringent standard if it would result in significant additional energy savings and is technologically feasible and economically justified. EPCA (as amended by the Energy Independence and Security Act, EISA) also requires that DOE review all standards every six years and issue either a notice that no revision is needed or a notice of proposed rulemaking and, two years later, a final rule. DOE finalized standards for several commercial products subject to ASHRAE standards on January 12, 2001, so, in ASAP's view, these standards are now due for review, regardless of whether they have been subject to revision in ASHRAE 90.1.

Note c. Under the same regular review requirement, DOE must review all standards set by EPCA 2005 (Energy Policy and Conservation Act) by fall 2011. These include automatic commercial ice makers, ceiling fan and ceiling fan light kits; compact fluorescent lamps; torchiere lighting fixtures; commercial unitary air conditioners; low-voltage distribution transformers; exit signs; traffic signals; pre-rinse spray valves and unit heaters.
